FIGHT AGAINST POVERTY

Melodie Mendoza, a member of the Canary Islands Parliamentary Assembly for the Agrupación Socialista Gomera (ASG), is promoting a citizen's income in the Canary Islands Parliament, similar to the national basic income.

"If we had a citizen's income for needy families, it would help to reduce poverty over time. The aim is social inclusion and a return to the labour market for those affected. We are convinced that people will no longer need help once they have their own income" said the ASG representative. "We will thus create a future perspective for the families who have already lost hope" she added.

The law would make the Canary Islands more supportive and socially just and guarantee that no Canarian person would feel forgotten by the government. As an argument, she cited other Spanish provinces that have already passed a law to this effect and that have been the worst off families" Mendoza said.

An idea for the future?

The idea of a guaranteed income requires some thought by leaders of future forms of society. Among other things, the loss of simple jobs is seen as a result of progressive digitalisation. Finland started a trial in 2017 and for two years paid 2,000 unemployed people between the ages of 25 and 58 years €560 per month unconditionally. The experiment was then discontinued. Although the respondents stated that they had suffered less stress, could concentrate better and had fewer health problems, there were no significant differences between the respondents and the unemployed who did not receive a basic income when they returned to the labour market. The exact analysis of the study is expected at the end of 2019 or beginning of 2020.

A unique treatment in the Canary Islands!

Human papilloma virus (HPV) causes transmissible infections in the skin (cutaneous and genital warts) and mucous membranes (genital and oro-pharyngeal apparatus).

The association between infection with this virus and cervical cancer is known.

Globally, high-risk types 16 and 18 are responsible for approximately 70% of invasive cervical cancers (72.4% in Spain).

Our clinic deals with the diagnosis and treatment of this virus in a radical way through cryotherapy.

Without using a scalpel, the cervix is completely preserved after our treatment.
